21. FEES: FEH discourages admission fees. If a small fee is necessary to cover the cost of optional meals or program materials, list the amount $ _____. Explain why this fee is necessary:
Fees will not be charged for the Friday Lectures; nor will registration be required for attendance on that day. The Friday Lectures will indicate they are funded by FEH.

Any notice of fees must be followed by this statement:

"All programs funded by the Florida Endowment for the Humanities are free and open to the public."

WARNING: The FEH staff and Board of Directors will carefully review all promotional materials of projects where fees are charged to ascertain if the Project Director has diligently and clearly informed the public of their free access to the program.

22. PROJECT DESCRIPTION (Begin this narrative with a brief description of the sponsoring organization)

WORK PLAN

Miami Design Preservation League, the sponsoring organization for the Art Deco Lecture Series is a non-profit organization devoted to preserving, protecting and promoting the cultural, social, economic, environmental and architectural integrity of the Miami Beach Architectural District. It was organized in 1976 and is the oldest Art Deco society in the world.

The Art Deco Lecture Series will follow the same format as the 1991 World Congress on Art Deco. This plan expanded the traditional Art Deco Lecture Series from years previous. (sample programs from World Congress and previous Lecture Series are attached).

The 1992 Lecture program will take place from Tuesday, January 7, 1992 through Friday afternoon, January 10. Participants will be invited to spend the remaining days at the 15th Annual Art Deco Weekend festivities.

The Lecture Series will include scholarly dissertations by speakers of international authority, round-table discussions, tours of Art Deco architecture including the newly restored apartments within Miami Beach's National Register Historic District. Evening events will be a theater trip, receptions and lunches at restored sites in the District and a gala Moon Over Miami Ball.

The program will be promoted to delegates from Art Deco Societies from around the world as an opportunity to understand the influences of the Art Deco style throughout the United States. Dade County serves as a showcase to underscore the adaptation of the style to Florida's tropical climate. Conference goers will continue the process of cataloging all of the world's Art Deco structures. During the World Congress, 1991, participants created a map of the world to chart the proliferation of Art Deco architecture. The process will lead to a Art Deco database being developed as part of the Barbara Baer Capitman Archives. The Archive database is an ongoing project of the Miami Design Preservation League. Materials collected in 1991 and in the 1992 Lecture Series will be exhibited during Art Deco Weekend, 1992.

23. PROMOTIONAL PLANS: Detail your plans to promote activities. Who will direct promotional efforts? Which media will you contact? List your promotional schedule. How will FEH be credited? How will you reach the targeted audience? (Note: Take pains with this section. FEH attaches great importance to a careful, detailed approach to project publicity.)

The Lecture Series will be promoted by the League's in-house staff. Promotions will include local newspaper advertising in the Miami Herald, New Times and Miami Today beginning November, 1991 through the dates of the lectures. Co-promotional advertising with the Annual Art Deco Weekend festival will include ads in major fall travel sections of newspapers such as the New York Times, the Montreal Gazette and the Chicago Tribune. The fall travel sections have been very effective for advertising during the Art Deco Weekend fifteen year history. Readers have the opportunity to write-in for more information. The newspaper provides the League with address labels to respond to inquiries. The Lecture Series will also be cross-promoted on the Weekend's radio and television public service announcements in early January, 1992. In October, 1991, League members will attend the National Trust's annual meeting in San Francisco. The League will conduct a large marketing program at the Trust meeting, including the distribution of 10,000 printed brochures about the Lecture Series. The Lecture Series will also be cross-promoted to feature Dade County as a destination for intellectual pursuits featuring art and architecture. The dates of the Lecture Series coincide with the second Annual Art Miami, a showcase of leading artists, galleries and collectors from the Miami Beach Convention Center, one block away from where the Lecture Series headquarters and meeting room are located. The League will print and distribute brochures about the Lecture Series to its international membership, travel writer list and Art Deco Societies throughout the world as well as the general public who will inquire as a result of the media marketing strategy.

The Florida Endowment for the Humanities will be included in all printed advertising for the Lecture Series, and will be referenced in the Lecture program as the sponsor of the Friday lectures which are free and open to the public without the requirement for pre-registration.
